Lucius A. Rogers vs. Orville J. Freer; assumpsit.

The entering wedge of a complaint that may prove fatal is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured at the commencement. It would be well, therefore, to keep the remedy within reach at all times.

May 30th is the day set apart for the decoration of soldiers graves. A day set apart to pay our respects to those who fought our battles and imperiled their lives that we might have liberty and an undivided country. Everything that constitutes national prosperity has come through the toils, and tears, and blood of others. We have to-day a well educated, well fed, well clothed, prosperous and happy nation, brought about by the blood of these same soldiers. The singing of patriotic songs, the making of patriotic speeches, the strewing of flowers upon their graves is something we owe to their memory; but this is not all, we must not forget the principles which inspired the heroism. They fought to save the union, died that this nation might be a free nation, left home and family, left everything that was dear to them and marched to the front to do all this. March with their comrades and families to their graves and deposit a token of love and remembrance.—Dowagiac Republican.

Dyspepsia has driven to an early and even suicidal grave many a man who, if he had tried the virtues of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, would be alive to-day and in the enjoyment of health and competence. Sufferer, be warned in season, and don't allow the system to run down.

When company "C" of the 4th Michigan cavalry left Kalamazoo for the front early in the sixties, in its ranks could have been seen one John Shoemaker, who hailed from Marcellus. During the three or more years that the company was in the south, Mr. Shoemaker became infatuated with the country and did not return to Michigan, but has for the 26 years since the close of the war made his home in the very heart of the old confederacy. He is back now for a visit with old comrades and friends. He is in the city to-day, and among others called on his old comrade, E. A. Crane, whom he had not met for a quarter of a century. Their warm handshakes and happy manner of recalling old reminiscences would convince the most skeptical that there is a strong bond of union among those who stood shoulder to shoulder in the great conflict.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Mr. W. F. Warner recently returned from a visit to his old home at Paw Paw. While there he took the measurements of an apple tree which was planted by his grandfather in 1836. The tree measures four feet diameter at the base. Five feet above, the tree is nine feet in circumference. There are eight large limbs spreading over an area of 60 feet. The smallest one is 35 inches around and the largest 50 inches. The height is 40 feet from the ground. Thirty-five to forty bushels of apples is the usual product when the season is favorable. Mr. Warner is looking for some one in Michigan who can boast of a larger tree.—Grand Rapids Leader, May 18th.

Mr. N. B. Crane received a genuine surprise Saturday night. At 11 o'clock, after he had retired at his residence on Tenth street for the night, he was aroused by a hack driving up in front. Some one got out of the hack and ascended the steps leading to the front door. Mr. Crane then got up, and looking out was amazed beyond all expression to recognize his father. Mr. Crane's father resides at Paw Paw, Mich., and is 80 years old. The trip out here was a long one for a man of his age, but he stood the trip well. He will remain here all summer.—Portland Oregonian, May 19th.

Something New.

If our readers wish to see the latest thing out in the way of playing cards, they should send 15 cents in stamps to Geo. DeHaven General Passenger Agent, Grand Rapids, Mich., for a pack of the new playing cards issued by the Chicago & West Michigan and the Detroit, Lansing & Northern Ry's. These cards are quite novel and much useful information may be gathered from them.
